

set of doctrines derived from “esoteric truths of the ancient past” that also absorbed elements of other faith systems.

SUZANNE VALADON, c. 1916

This self-portrait is by Valadon, to whom Satie proposed marriage on the night they met at the Chat Noir cabaret. During their brief affair, Valadon painted Satie’s portrait; he gave her necklaces that were made of sausages.

A change of style

With funds running low, Satie moved in 1890 to a smaller apartment in Montmartre. While there, he had a passionate affair
