

1937

Symphony No. 5 in D minor, written in response to the denunciation of his experimental work, is enthusiastically received in Leningrad.

1938

Completes the first of his 15 string quartets, which are both more personal and more adventurous than his orchestral oeuvre.

1942

Symphony No. 7 in C major, "Leningrad," is performed in the besieged city.