

Aardvarks may dig temporary burrows to hide from lions.

Aardvark park

African aardvarks live in their cool, underground burrows during the hot day. They forage at night for termites, using their long tongue to lap up insects.

Aardvarks destroy termite mounds to get to their prey.

Chipmunks dive into burrows before bobcats can eat them.

Most predators can't fit in burrows.

Chipmunk county

There's no mound of dirt by the entrance of a chipmunk burrow because they carry away the dug-up dirt in their cheeks. The burrows have many entrances and chambers of nuts and seeds.