

WHAT SKILLS DO YOU HAVE?

Think about the skills you are developing in school and during your after-school activities or jobs. You may be highly creative, be a great communicator, or have advanced IT skills; you may be good at problem-solving, or excel at working with your hands.

WHAT ARE YOUR PERSONAL QUALITIES?

While you might be able to learn new skills to pursue a career, it is far more difficult to change your personality. Think about what kind of person you are, and ask others to describe how they see you. Choosing a job that fits with your personality will make you happier in your career and far more likely to be an effective employee.

WHAT ARE YOUR CIRCUMSTANCES?

Do you want to work in a particular place—close to family and friends, for example, or in a big city—or are you prepared to relocate?

Do you have any health conditions that may affect your applications?

What are the costs of education and training in your chosen area? Can you realistically afford them?

To focus your thoughts, make a checklist that you can refer to throughout your career journey.
