

PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICER

JOB DESCRIPTION

Organizations hire Public Relations (PR) officers to manage and boost their reputations. As a PR officer, you will produce campaigns to promote awareness of a company and its products and/or services. PR officers can also work within an institution to raise awareness and visibility of the company's projects, programs, and initiatives internally.

SALARY

Publicity assistant ★★★★★

Account director ★★★★★

INDUSTRY PROFILE

Highly competitive job market • Majority of work in large firms • Most work located in big cities • Global opportunities • Freelance possible

CAREER PATHS

PR officers can work within organizations, communicating with both staff and the wider public, or for agencies hired by corporate clients. They also need to develop strong relationships with media contacts.

ASSISTANT Right out of school, you can take an internship or an administrative role in the PR department of a large organization, or within a PR agency.

GRADUATE You can study PR at college, but most employers welcome candidates with degrees in disciplines such as English, journalism, business studies, or marketing.

PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICER As a PR officer, you may be expected to study for higher professional degrees in order to progress to more senior roles.

▼ RELATED CAREERS

- ▶ MARKETING EXECUTIVE see pp. 68–69
- ▶ ADVERTISING ACCOUNT EXECUTIVE see pp. 72–73
- ▶ EVENTS MANAGER see pp. 88–89
- ▶ CHARITY FUNDRAISER see pp. 90–91
- ▶ ADVERTISING COPYWRITER Produces text for marketing and advertising materials. They also liaise with clients, designers, and the rest of the creative team to agree on campaign style and content.