

With this, we end our discussion on real estate, its characteristics, RESIDEX, and REITs. Real estate is psychologically very easy to hold and if done well, can be very rewarding. However, on the darker side of the moon, it requires a lot of time, effort, and skill. All portfolios don't need to have real estate. Purely from an investment perspective, real estate has more substitutes. It depends a lot on an individual's personal biases and the Lazy Profile that we had created earlier. In the next section, we will see where exactly in our Lazy Plan does real estate fit.
