

The background of the page is a collage of Indian Rupee banknotes. Visible denominations include 100, 50, 20, and 10 Rupees. The notes are in various shades of grey and white, with some text in Hindi and English. A large, white, wavy shape on the left side of the page frames the text.

---

Well, can mutual fund managers do whatever they like with our money? Each mutual fund scheme has a 'Mandate' attached to it. It is a guide to what can or cannot be done with the money, for instance, the kind of assets and the sub-categories they can invest in and the restraints they might have. For instance, some mutual funds can only invest in equities, some only in debt, some in a mixture, some can only invest in mid-cap equities, others only in banking stocks, and so on.

---