

CREDIT CARDS

In general, credit cards are the most expensive form of money and almost all financial experts and books profess against the use of credit cards. Up until a few years back, credit cards would have been a complete no-no for everyone. However, now credit cards can be used by those who are disciplined. This is because credit cards offer a lot of deals and also has a system of reward points that leads to significant savings and advantages. There are apps like CRED which reward people to pay using credit cards through their platform. However, the trick is to be disciplined and pay off the dues regularly. If we are not disciplined and do not pay off credit card bills on time, then the cost of using it would be much more than the discounts.
