

These are all examples of the convergence of long-term averages. We will not take any action over here as, despite the crossover, the market is in sideways movement.

With this, we end our discussion on GMMA and moving averages. A beginner should exclusively focus on practice. They must go through hundreds of charts and try looking for each of these and practice in the same way we did for candlesticks, one candlestick at a time until they acquire the efficiency in using moving averages. Practice, Practice, and Practice! There is no other way to become a good trader.
