

This is yet another example of A/D indicator. There are no divergences between price and A/D line in this case. However, we can use the same to take trades based on whether A/D is positive or not. We can take trades then using other indicators. This is how we will use A/D indicator. An analyst will get fluent with the same based on the practice they put into it. It is advised that they spend time experimenting with the indicator on multiple charts to understand more about it. With this, we end our discussion for the first indicator. Let us now move to the next indicator.