

This is an example of long term momentum indicator. We see that this smooths out a lot of movement and creates clear signals. The downside of using longer-term indicators is that they produce lagging signals occasionally. In this chart, the indicator moves around zero when a sideways market is in motion but gives clear signals for trends. An analyst will have to figure out a way to segregate these from other clearer indicators.