

▼ CANNIBALISM Tiny bones in the stomach of this fossilized Coelophysis were once thought to be those of a baby Coelophysis and a sign of cannibalism. However, some experts now think the bones were those of other reptiles that Coelophysis hunted.

The tail was long and stiff. It acted like a rudder, helping Coelophysis balance when running after prey or fleeing from bigger carnivores.

251 million years ago    200    145    65

Triassic

Jurassic

Cretaceous