

▲ INSIDE THE EGG Scientists have found many clutches of dinosaur eggs, but not all of them contain baby dinosaurs. To find out if anything is inside, the eggs are scanned and the rock is then carefully chipped with tiny chisels or dissolved in weak acid. It can take as long as a year to reveal the tiny bones and tissues of an embryo hidden inside the egg.