

After the dinosaurs perished, mammals took over and became the dominant animals on land. Mammals are hairy, warm-blooded animals that feed their young on milk (such as humans).

