

On their toes

Hoofed mammals are divided into two groups depending on how many toes they have. Horses, rhinos, and tapirs have an odd number of toes; antelopes, deer, hippos, and pigs have an even number of toes.

LIVING RELATIVE

Chevrotains (also called mouse deer) are found in the rainforests of Southeast Asia and Africa. Although it's not clear whether they are close relatives of Leptomeryx, they are about the same size and, like Leptomeryx, lack horns or antlers but have small tusks. These deerlike animals usually live in pairs.
