

Vertebrates are animals with backbones. Fish were the first vertebrates; they appeared in Earth's oceans more than 500 million years ago. These first fish were jawless and very different from today's fish.

