

“Brainy” exercise Even your brain uses calories. Neurons in the brain produce chemicals called neurotransmitters to relay their signals to different parts of the body. To produce those neurotransmitters, the neurons need energy taken from your blood in the form of glucose. So, any exercise such as dance or aerobics classes that call for concentration, coordination, and skill also requires extra mental energy, which burns even more calories!

