

Punjabi prince The trousers worn by the dapper Raja Ravi-Sher Singh of Kalsia, India, at Croydon Aerodrome are almost wide enough to qualify as "Oxford bags". The Raja's slim frame is emphasized by his tight, single-breasted sports jacket.

Henley Regatta While many men used the occasion of the boat race at Henley to don blazers in colours or stripes that declared their allegiance to a club or country, this gentleman opted for white ducks and a double-breasted blue blazer.

Before the race German racing driver Heinrich Joachim von Morgen wears an informal attire of tweed cap, buttoned sports jacket, and knickerbockers, appropriate for a box at the Nürburgring race track.

Health and comfort The Men's Dress Reform Party (MDRP) was founded in London in 1929 to rail against restrictive clothing. During a Dress Reform competition a male model poses in a waterproof jacket and shorts.

Golf Life magazine in 1938 declared Charles Munn, who made his money from greyhound tracks, "Palm Beach's most eligible bachelor". Here, Munn replaces the more customary plus fours with wide trousers with turn-ups.

JAEGER

The London company of Jaeger had promoted woollen clothing since the late 19th century. After the Prince of Wales championed the distinctive Fair Isle pattern, golf pullovers became a staple of the sporting wardrobe. Both men in this advertisement wear their pullovers with shirt and tie. Matching golf hose (knee-length knitted socks) were also available.

Jaeger advertisement, c.1936