

Shiny tonic suit

Skinny tie

Tight, cropped trousers

Dr Martens shoes

1979

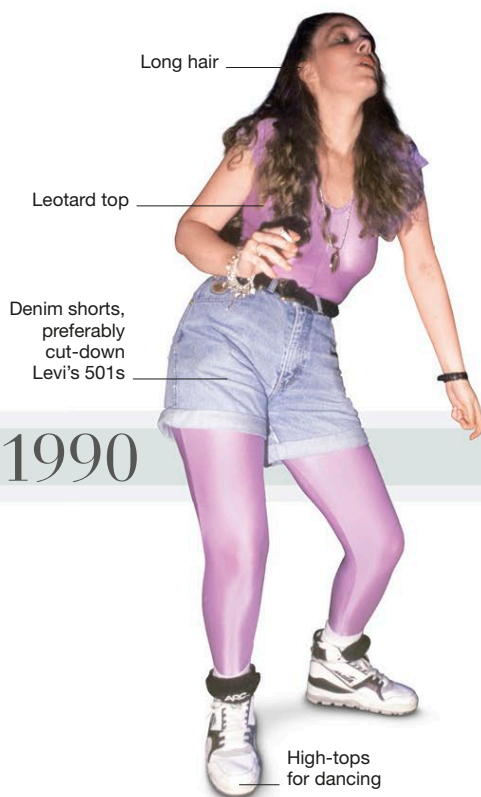

Frilled full-sleeved shirt

Pirate-style boots

1981

Mod style The Specials were one of the leading British ska bands of the late 1970s and early 1980s, fusing punk energy with Jamaican ska that was sped up to a danceable beat. They wore 1960s rude boy clothes, including slim-cut suits, porkpie hats, and Fred Perry shirts.

Antmania Adam Ant was a symbol of the New Romantic subculture but saw himself as a post-punk, styled as both dangerous and romantic. He dressed in flamboyant clothes inspired by 18th-century military uniforms and wore warrior make-up.

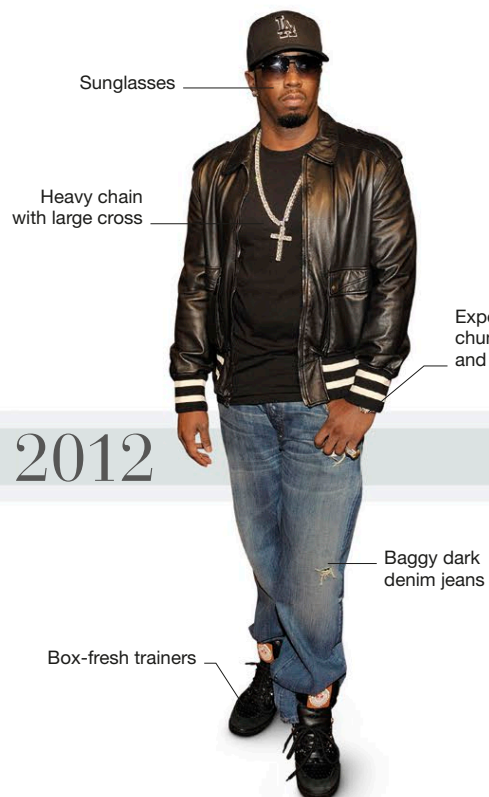

Long hair

Leotard top

Denim shorts, preferably cut-down Levi's 501s

High-tops for dancing

1990

Sunglasses

Heavy chain with large cross

Expensive chunky watch and ring

Baggy dark denim jeans

Box-fresh trainers

2012

Rave scene As police cracked down on illegal rave parties, Acid House returned to nightclubs, in particular the Hacienda Club in Manchester, UK. Fluorescent leggings, high-top trainers, and cycling jerseys were the best clothes for dancing all night long.

Hip hop Sean "Diddy" Combs, aka Puff Daddy, became a fashion icon through his career as a hip-hop star. With support from Tommy Hilfiger and US Vogue editor Anna Wintour he launched the Sean John clothing line in 1998, which brought together music culture and street fashion.

Customized Victorian-style top hat

Layered, distressed details

19th-century walking stick

Fantasy-inspired platform boots

2017

Steampunk The big girls' (and boys') version of playing dress-ups, steampunk and cosplay bring fantasy fashion and science fiction into the real world. Steampunk is a mash-up of punk and the clothing of the late 19th century, a time when steam power was the new technology.